Bringing 'Bach' Music To Local Schools

Musicians from Queens College will be performing free classical music concerts at public schools across Queens this spring through a program titled “Bach to School.” As noted, the performing arts initiative was launched by Queens College English literature professor Maxine Fisher, who believes in expanding musical education in primary and secondary schools. Fisher (standing at center) is pictured flanked by (from left to right) John Kelly, Ryan Oberlin, Anthony Izzo and Thomas Lee, all of whom are saxophonists from the college’s Aaron Copland School of Music.
